

A French Child Thanks America

It was a grey-blue envelope with the French postmark—one of many such which come to a group of warm-hearted American men and women who have constituted themselves god-fathers and godmothers to the little French children made fatherless by the war—and this is the message it held, written laboriously by Felix Gaizdire to his "godmother" in America.

"I read your letter again and again while watching my cows. Jeanne d'Arc, who was only a shepherd girl, once saved our fair France. Now it is our brother—the brave soldiers of America—who came to fight by the side of ours. Dear benefactor, I watch my cattle. Already I am brave, and in autumn I shall go to school again."

"Already I am brave!" And only a few brief months ago this little lad was homeless, shuddering away from the sight of carnage, crushed into destitution by the merciless foes of his country. A little help, some cherishing words in a letter written by an American woman, and the bruised life was healed again.

There are thousands and thousands of such little children in France. Through the activities of an American organization, "The Fatherless Children of France," many of these perishing little folks, like Felix Gaizdire, were "adopted" by warm-hearted Americans between the autumn of 1917 and the signing of the armistice.

—an adoption which meant only the writing of friendly letters from time to time and the furnishing of ten cents a day to help in the child's support at home in France with those of his own kin. But thousands more of these children must be granted a chance for life, must be saved for the future of the world—must have help given to them until they too can say: "Already I am brave. And in the autumn I shall go to school again!"

A special campaign, with Mrs. Walter S. Brewster of Chicago as chairman, is being undertaken by The Fatherless Children of France, Room 635, 410 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, for the purpose of securing help for 50,000 more of these children who should be "made brave" again, and whose names were on the waiting list when the armistice was signed. This organization co-operates with a similar one in France, of which Marshal Joffre is head. The drive is on—and it costs only 10 cents to care for a child for a day; $3.00 for a month; or $36.50 to become a godmother or godfather. Such godparent chooses her own protegee—boy or girl, as she elects, from the lists at the organization headquarters, and is put in direct communication with the child through correspondence. The small contribution made supplements the tiny pension of 10 cents daily allowed each child by the French Government, but it is sufficient to keep body and soul together.

SALMON, A GOOD SUMMER FOOD

All canned salmon is good eating, especially during hot summer months, when the mind turns as naturally to the tempting varieties of this popular fish as it does to iced tea.

The high food value of salmon and its cheapness are recognized. It is not so generally known that there is just as much difference between types of salmon as there is between grades of steak or coffee.

A letter just sent out by Armour and Company lists the several varieties of salmon in the order of their quality. According to epicures the Sock-eye is the best eating of all. The Sock-eye is a native from Puget Sound to the Fraser river. It is a small fish rarely exceeding ten pounds. The flesh has a bright, golden red color, is firm in texture yields a rich red oil and has an exquisite flavor.

The Chinook is the largest of the salmon family, averaging about twenty-two pounds, individuals weighing sometimes as much as eighty-five pounds. It is found along the American coast from Ventura river to the Behring Sea. The flesh runs from a deep salmon red to almost white according to the locality of the catch. Oil is abundant and the taste delicious. The flesh is distinguished from that of the Sock-eye by the ease with which the tissue breaks into layers upon slight pressure.

The Red Salmon, caught in Alaskan waters is commercially known as the Red Alaska. Its flesh is bright red in color, firm in texture but does not have the rich oil and flavor of the Sock-eye. It is a fine table fish and has many friends among consumers.

The "Cohoe" or Medium Red is a little heavier than the Sock-eye and a native of the Eel River, Calif., north to Alaskan waters. The flesh is less firm than that of the Red Alaska and a trifle lighter in color, not possessing the deep red hue of the Alaska. The flavor, however, is excellent, and its color alone keeps it from ranking with the best.

The Pink is the smallest of American salmon, weighing five or six pounds. This species is found from the Sacramento river north to Alaska. In Puget Sound it is known as the "Humpback" and strange to say it runs every other year only in Puget Sound. The flesh is paler than the Medium Red. The flavor is sweet and makes a palatable dish for the table. The Pink is suitable for baking and cooking and for this purpose is as good as the Red Alaska or Cohoe. The demand for it has become so great, because of its cheapness that some factories which formerly packed the higher grades, now pack only the Pinks.

The Chum is found from San Francisco to Behring Strait. The flesh is almost white and while not so firm as the other species it is no less wholesome. The flavor, however, is peculiar and a taste must be acquired for it. The Chum is in much favor south of the Ohio river.

Variation in color, oil and flavor make the different values of canned salmon. The cheaper grades are packed with no less care than the most costly and as food are equally valuable and wholesome.

Salmon has become of great economic importance owing to its high food value and the comparative low cost. It is rich in protein, which nature transforms into the brain, blood and muscle of the human body.

Announcement

News equally as welcome and startling to America's 6,000,000 motorists as the recent reduction in tire prices is the announcement, just made by the B. R. Goodrich Rubber Co., of a new adjustment basis for their fabric and cord tires. The company's new adjustment figures are 6,000 miles for safety tread tires and 8,000 miles for cord tires. This is a remarkable increase over the old figures of 3,500 miles on fabric and 5,000 miles on cords.

The announcement of increased mileage adjustment on Goodrich tires silences all skeptics who feared that the recent price reduction meant a cheapening of the quality of the tire. On the contrary, it has just the opposite meaning, say prominent local tire dealers. That is, the motorist will be assured, with proper care of tires, greater mileage than ever before at a lower cost.

Steady and progressive advancement in the construction of Goodrich tires and unimpeachable testimony advanced from rugged service on the company tire test car fleets, supplemented by unsolicited reports from users throughout the United States, convinced officials of the company that their product is delivering mileage far in excess of the old 3,500 and 5,000 mile adjustment basis. Confident that the performance records received daily meant universal and not occasional fulfillment, the company decided to announce the new adjustment figures, thereby sharing with the customer the benefits of increased tire service.
